HISTORICAL PAST

The northern Spencer Gulf was first navigated by Matthew Flinders in 1802, followed by Frenchman Louis-Claude de Freycinet in 1803. In 1840, explorer Edward John Eyre reported the presence of iron stone in the Middleback Ranges, 50km west of the city of Whyalla. The first attempts to mine the area began in the 1890s.

The city itself started as a tiny work camp on the shore at the foot of Hummock Hill in 1901. The camp was set up as a service base for the iron ore jetty constructed by Broken Hill Proprietary Company Limited (BHP). The settlement then known as 'Hummock Hill', gradually expanded until 1914 when Whyalla was proclaimed a town. BHP Co. Ltd. extended its industrial activities in Whyalla by building shipyards and a blast furnace in 1940.

The booming town was proclaimed a city in 1961. The steelworks started production in 1965. After construction of 66 ships, the Whyalla shipyards closed in 1978. On October 28, 2000, the steelworks became an independent company, with several name changes over the time.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME "WHYALLA"

In 1914 the town of Whyalla was proclaimed in the SA Parliament. The origin of the name is open to debate, but it is believed to have been named after a nearby ridge, Mount Whyalla. However, it could also have evolved from a similar word in the Barningar language - 'Kayalla' which means 'Northern Country'.

WHYALLA STEELWORKS TOUR

Learn the stories and see behind the scenes of more than 100 years of significant Australian iron and steelmaking history.

The Whyalla steelworks is a fully-integrated operation, starting with the mining of raw materials and ending with the distribution of finished steel products.

Depending on production and maintenance schedules you will get to see different parts of the process operating around the 1000 hectare site. Your tour will take you past the blast furnace, coke ovens, reed beds, steelmaking and casting plant and the rolling mills where structural steel, rail line and steel railway sleeper sections are made.

Owing to safety requirements the tours are conducted along an agreed and authorised route and passengers do not leave the vehicle or enter any of the buildings whilst on the steelworks site. As this is an industrial site which operates 24 hours per day, 7 days a week, at times production schedules, plant shut downs, maintenance issues and road works can impact on the tour and certain operations will not be viewed. These factors are outside our control.

Your guide will explain how hematite and magnetite iron ore from the nearby South Middleback Ranges at Iron Duke is transformed into over 90 different grades of steel.

All tours are conducted by the Whyalla Visitor Information Centre under agreement with the Whyalla Steelworks and occur 9.30am Monday, Wednesday and Friday excluding Public Holidays. Bookings essential.

ABORIGINAL HERITAGE

Whyalla is very proud of its Aboriginal heritage around the city and towards the north, particularly the coastal areas.

Artefacts discovered at Point Lowly indicate that the area has been occupied by Aboriginal tribes for at least 6000 years. The Whyalla area itself was visited by semi-nomadic tribes of Malkaripangala people – a subdivision of the Barnjarla Aboriginal group, who were culturally linked to the Lake Eyre and Lake Torrens tribes. The most important sites were the hills and caves at Cultana Ranges, Tregalana salt lake, Weeroona Bay, Stony Point, Black Point, Fitzgerald Bay, Hummock Hill, Mount Young and Mount Laura.

One of their most significant mythological stories is The Moon and Seven Sisters (the Pleiades star constellation). Barnjarla people wore cloaks made from kangaroo skin, with fur turned inside during winter. In summer, they smeared their bodies with fat and ochre. They hunted both land and marine animals, however, they never included oysters and shellfish in their diet. By the 1870's, the majority of Eyre Peninsula Aborigines lived at fringe camps near the white settlement. The Malkaripangala virtually disappeared.

S.A.'s Largest Country Market – Local arts, crafts, hobbies, and food, BHP museum, mini golf, shops, stalls, tea rooms – sites available.

Located 300 metres north of Maritime Museum on Port Augusta Highway. Generally the market is open on the last weekend of each month. 10am to 4pm each day. For more information 0436 378 869.

WATER SUPPLY

Turn on a tap in Whyalla to make your morning coffee and you are drinking water that has been piped around 380km from the River Murray. Prior to 1944, all water supplies relied on rainwater collection “when it rained,” but primarily brought across the gulf by barge from Port Pirie. Construction of the first Morgan to Whyalla pipeline commenced in 1940 and was completed in 1944.

Rapid development in the Upper Spencer Gulf region following World War II indicated the need for more water than could be provided by the original pipeline. In 1962 construction began on a $30 million duplicate pipeline next to the first. The two pipelines lay side by side until near the Baroota Reservoir (north-east of Port Germein) where the second line veers across Spencer Gulf via a 14 kilometre submarine pipe section to Whyalla.

The dual pipeline system is able to meet a demand of 66,000 mega litres a year.

WHYALLA WETLANDS

Whyalla wetlands is an ideal picnic area with barbeques, a nature playground, toilets and shelter; a perfect spot for time out.

Paths around the lakes are equipped with disabled-access ramps. Kids can unearth adventure on the nature playground suitable for children to have adventures climbing, sliding and enjoying the flying fox.

A combined recreational and stormwater capture facility developed by the Whyalla Council, the wetlands include almost seven hectares of artificial lakes fed by a combination of underground seepage and stormwater runoff. Water from the lakes are home to many species of aquatic plants, animals and birds. Birdlife not usually seen in Whyalla is being attracted with many species now breeding and raising their young there. The Wetlands Walk is part of Whyalla Heritage Trailways, and as such interpretive signs are interspersed throughout the wetlands.

In keeping with the innovative theme of the wetlands, there are environmentally friendly hybrid toilets. The toilet area also includes baby change facilities and disabled access wheelchair ramps all the way to the toilets.

WHYALLA FORESHORE & MARINA

You'll soon discover why the foreshore is one of the city's most-loved spots to enjoy, with its safe swimming beach, a café, change rooms and toilets, a lifesaving and rescue facility, extensive lawns, free electric barbeques and large popular playground area with shade-sail. The Whyalla Foreshore is linked with Ada Ryan Gardens providing an extended recreational area.

The beach offers swimming in relatively shallow waters, and there is also a swimming enclosure in the deeper waters of the marina. Land-based anglers will benefit from a new fishing jetty replacing the original built in the 1970s to provide an ideal place to catch tommy ruff, garfish, and some species of whiting, squid and blue swimmer crabs. At low tide you can walk out to the "blue line" in search of a feed of fresh crab.

Take a stroll along the seafront, or perhaps at low tide walk out to the sand bar or even a walk for the more energetic up to the Hummock Hill Lookout with its historic wartime gun emplacements, or just sit back and watch the boats returning from a trip out. You are more than likely to spot some of our local, friendly dolphins leading and following craft right back to the ramp. So, keep your eyes open for one of their playful appearances.

While we encourage people to enjoy our wildlife, please remember that feeding, touching or getting too close to our marine mammals is prohibited under the National Parks and Wildlife Act. Rangers and fisheries officers patrol the region to ensure our wildlife is protected. People risk fines and/or imprisonment if caught behaving in an incorrect manner toward our marine mammals.

LOOKOUTS & PUBLIC ART

HUMMOCK HILL LOOKOUT

Overlooking the eastern end of Whyalla, Hummock Hill offers exceptional 360 degree views of Whyalla and the Spencer Gulf. It was developed by BHP as a gift to the city to commemorate the company's centenary year and opened during the 1986 South Australia Jubilee Royal Visit.

Hummock Hill was the site of first settlement at the turn of the century. A one-way sealed road (suitable for both caravans and coaches) takes vehicles to the parking area adjacent to the lookout. Facilities include a restored wartime gun, heritage interpretive signage and a sheltered viewing and picnic area.

During World War II, Hummock Hill saw service as a gun battery with four guns, command and signals posts. Early stages of the fortifications were built by BHP workmen, but the majority of the work was carried out by gunners of the 26th Heavy Anti-Aircraft Battery under the supervision of the 65th Deputy Commander Royal Engineers who arrived in Whyalla on February 14, 1942.

FLINDERS & FREYCINET LOOKOUT

The lookout offers magnificent views of the Upper Spencer Gulf, Southern Flinders Ranges and Middleback Range in the west. Located at the intersection of Farrell and Elliott streets.

In 1802 Matthew Flinders was the first European to navigate and chart this unknown coast of South Australia, solving the centuries old mystery as to whether Australia was one continent or two. Ten months later, in January 1803, Louis-Claude de Freycinet (1779 – 1842) navigated and charted the isolated coast for the Baudin expedition. He and his crew spent a night at False Bay, off what was to become Whyalla, and were impressed by the local scenery.

Don't forget to take your selfie with the iconic contemporary sculptures of these famous explorers.

THE LOADED DOG

The Loaded Dog sculpture was created by world-famous sculptor Andy Scott, entirely out of steel using a unique construction technique of welding thousands of pieces of 10mm and 12mm rod together. Designed and constructed in Glasgow in 2006, the steel sculpture took shape during 2007, and was unveiled to the public in 2008. The Loaded Dog is the only example of Andy Scott's distinctive work in South Australia

WALKS & TRAILS

FREYCINET TRAIL

A stroll or a serious walk along just a small section or lengthier hike of this heritage nature trail will most definitely unearth Whyalla's natural wonders and coastal landscapes, giving spectacular views of Spencer Gulf and the distant Southern Flinders Ranges.

FITZGERALD BAY/POINT LOWLY HIKING, CYCLING AND DRIVING TRAIL.

This 12km long heritage and nature trail, which starts alongside a tidal creek, hugs the coastline to Point Lowly. The trail covers 12km one-way and is divided into two sections, the Fitzgerald Bay Hiking Trail (4km) and the Fitzgerald Bay-Point Lowly hiking, cycling and driving trail (8km).

Always carry enough water and use sun protection while on the trail.

WHYALLA HERITAGE TRAILWAYS

Unearth the city of Whyalla. Explore trails and walks that will educate, enlighten and showcase the many facets and stories of Whyalla.

In 2001, the city of Whyalla celebrated one hundred years since its establishment. To commemorate this significant event and to promote the city's unique history and environment, Whyalla City Council developed three heritage walking trails – the City Walk,

Education and Cultural Walk, and the Wetlands Walk – jointly known as The Centenary Trailways Project. Before embarking on any of the trails, please ensure that you have enough drinking water and remember to use sun protection.

CITY WALK

This walk, at the north-eastern end of the city, encompasses many of the city's historical sites including where some of the first buildings were located. Hummock Hill is included in the walk and the panoramic view of the city, Spencer Gulf and Flinders Ranges makes the climb to the top worthwhile. While at the top of the hill you can examine the guns used to protect the township during World War II.

Beginning and ending at the corner of Jamieson and Horwood Streets, the trail follows the Whyalla steelworks fence on the northern side of Hummock Hill to the top and then winds down to the central business district. Interpretive signs along the trail explain the history of the settlement, industrial history, natural and maritime heritage, and the city's unique architecture.

Length of the trail: 1.9km. Follow the red route markers.

WARNING – there is a steep incline on Hummock Hill and the trail merges with the road on the southern slope.

EDUCATION & CULTURAL WALK

Map Ref: F10

The Education and Cultural walk is situated geographically in the centre of Whyalla and encompasses the main education and cultural precinct of the city including the campus of the University of SA, TAFE SA, leisure centre, Regional Development Australia and Middleback Art Centre.

The trail starts and finishes at the Whyalla Leisure Centre. There are interpretive signs along the way providing interesting facts about the significance of the buildings and the area.

Length of the trail: 2.1km. Follow the blue route markers.

WETLANDS WALK

Wetlands Walk traverses the site of the Whyalla Wetlands.

Part of this land originally incorporated the city's first airport. Interpretive signage along the trail provides information about the city's first airport, the city's water management initiatives and a wealth of historical information. There are many indigenous and introduced plants to admire as you meander the pathway while listening to the local bird life.

Length of trail: 0.9 to 2.5km depending on where you walk.

Refer to page 8 for further information and map.

COASTAL ATTRACTIONS

FIRE DANGER

Fire danger season in the Eastern Eyre Peninsula runs from 1st November to 15th April each year.

DID YOU KNOW?

The lighthouse and the two heritage listed lighthouse keepers' cottages are the oldest buildings in the Whyalla area and they are available for hire.

POINT LOWLY

A 20-minute drive from Whyalla (about 34km) on a sealed road.

A short drive to the Point Lowly region will definitely unearth Whyalla's natural wonders and opportunities for you to experience pure relaxation to "recharge" your batteries with beautiful views of the gulf, coastline, and across to the Southern Flinders Ranges.

Dolphins and birdlife often frequent the waters, while the rocky shoreline is popular for fishing, sightseeing, or a relaxing and leisurely stroll.

Facilities include a breakwater and an all-weather concrete double boat ramp with a floating walkway between the ramps and solar lighting. Located near the boat ramp is a playground and toilet facilities – these include disabled access toilets and cold showers.

Some really good possibilities to add to your memorable collection of selfies. Swimmers need to be aware of strong currents and rip tides in this area.

POINT LOWLY CAMPING

A very popular spot for motor-homers, caravaners and campers, a permit system allows stays of up to 14 days in designated areas (see map on page 14).

Permits are available at Point Lowly using an honour system and payment box at the amenities block or from the Whyalla Visitor Information Centre and Council office on Darling Terrace.

POINT LOWLY LIGHTHOUSE

An iconic landmark, oldest building in the Whyalla area and a sentimental favourite of the locals, the lighthouse is a magnet to visitors. The heritage listed Point Lowly Lighthouse, first flashing out its safety beacon in 1883, was raised a further nine metres in 1909, manned for 90 years before being automated, and eventually delisted from the Australian Maritime Safety Authority register in the 1990s. Completed in 1883, the lighthouse eased the way for maritime traffic around Point Lowly.

Since 1995, the lighthouse has been owned by the City of Whyalla, while the lighthouse keepers' cottages are available for holiday accommodation through the Whyalla Visitor Information Centre. All enquiries and bookings - Whyalla Visitor Information Centre 1800 088 589 (or online at whyalla.com.)

You just can't leave the area without snapping a shot of the lighthouse and the Southern Flinders Ranges in the background. Share your favourite picture and check into "Whyalla Tourism" on Facebook.

PORT BONYTHON (SANTOS)

Port Bonython commenced operation in 1984 and crude oil, naphthas, propane and butane (LPG), are produced and held in storage tanks with capacities of 250,000 barrels, before being pumped along a 2.4km jetty to waiting tankers of up to 110,000 tonnes deadweight capacity.

Tours do not operate over the Santos plant, but visitors can clearly see its size and complexity from the roadside and shoreline vantage points. An information bay is provided for visitors.

FITZGERALD BAY

Approximately 20km northeast of Whyalla.

Stunning views of the blue gulf waters framed by picturesque hills and the Southern Flinders Ranges are an extension of the “Point Lowly experience” and should be part of your trip to this coastal region. Semi-desert vegetation reaches to the beaches that are mainly formed by pebbles, sand and a line of mangroves. The scenic drive extends approximately 20kms north to the uppermost holiday shack area of Douglas Point. The first section from the turn off to Fitzgerald Bay is a sealed road while the remainder is a gravel surface.

Fitzgerald Bay was home to a kingfish farm operator. The sea cages are still visible from the shoreline. The Freycinet heritage trail starts here.

SHINGLE BEACH RIDGES

The Stranded Shingle Beach Ridges north along the western coastline of Upper Spencer Gulf have received recognition as a State Heritage Place on the South Australian Heritage Register. There are only two other places in the world registered with similar shingle ridges being in Egypt and Scotland.

A geological phenomenon, these stranded shingle beach deposits have been traced over a distance of some 50kms from near the head of Spencer Gulf southwards along its western shore to Stony Point, and provide a distinctive geological feature which is believed to date back to the Pleistocene period.

The movement of gravel by present day waves in the northern part of Spencer Gulf is restricted compared with that indicated by the ridges. It appears that the combination of a high sea level (three metres higher than today), strong easterly winds, and high wave energy dissipation along the shore line, were responsible for the deposits.

BUSH CAMPING

Bush camping is available at Fitzgerald Bay in three designated areas. 16km along the Point Lowly/Port Bonython road is the turn-off to Fitzgerald Bay.

CUTTLEFISH

DID YOU KNOW?

Cuttlefish are colour blind.

They have 'W' shaped pupils which are thought to allow them to see both behind and in front at the same time.

Cuttlefish are not actually a fish. They are a cephalopod (Greek for 'head-foot') and their feet, or tentacles, actually connect to their head rather than their body.

Cuttlefish have blue blood, three hearts, eight arms and two feeding tentacles!

TO LEARN MORE...

The Whyalla Visitor Information Centre has all the information you will need about the Whyalla cuttlefish. You can watch a DVD on their antics and habitat, find out how you can dive or snorkel to see them up close or obtain your cuttlefish souvenirs.

Call the Visitor Centre on 1800 088 589 for further information.

The annual migration of the Australian Giant Cuttlefish 'Sepia apama' is one of the most spectacular natural events in the Australian marine environment.

Only on the northern coastline of Whyalla can one of the most spectacular natural events in both the Australian and International marine environment be experienced - the annual migration of the Australian Giant Cuttlefish Sepia apama to the waters of the Upper Spencer Gulf.

Congregating close to shore at various sites including steelworks breakwaters, Stony Point, Black Point, False Bay, Point Lowly and Fitzgerald Bay, these "chameleons of the sea" are one of the largest species of cuttlefish found in the world, reaching up to 60cm in length and weighing up to 5kg.

Infrastructure has been installed at Black Point and Stony Point to enable access to swim with and view the cuttlefish.

Further along the coast at Black Point is a wooden staircase, which leads down to the rocky shoreline with additional concrete aprons and rails for divers' use.

The water temperature is between 12° and 15° Celsius from June to August, and it is recommended you wear a wetsuit as the cuttlefish are spawning during the winter months and therefore the water is quite cold.

The migration by these majestic creatures to these waters is for the sole purpose of spawning. Every year between May and August, they come in their thousands to mate and reproduce, in the process creating an amazing spectacle of cunning games, predation, underwater light shows and colourful kaleidoscopic displays.

Cuttlefish are intelligent creatures able to change their colour, shape and texture as they move along the seabed to imitate rocks, sand or seaweed.

FROM FORESHORE JETTY AND MARINA

Catches of tommy ruff (Australian herring), garfish, whiting and squid can be had, especially on the rising tide. Blue swimmer crabs are often caught in the warmer months.

Between spring and autumn, the beach is a popular spot for crabbing at low tide. The blue swimmer crabs are easiest to catch at low tide and as the tide turns to come in.

FROM ROCKS

The rocky coastline and sandy beaches extending from Point Lowly Lighthouse are popular spots for salmon, garfish, tommy ruff and small-to medium-sized snapper. The best land-based snapper and salmon fishing is often experienced during the cooler months, but a major run of snapper often occurs in January.

(However, please note, there is a total snapper ban during November to mid-December).

Squid jigs can only be used on the eastern side of Point Lowly due to the cuttlefish (and squid) closure in place at all times in the waters around Whyalla and Point Lowly.

BY BOAT

Whyalla is a boatie's paradise for many different species including garfish, snook, Tommy ruff, flathead, snapper and whiting. It is regarded as the home of Australia's "big reds" with snapper between 10 and 15kg regularly caught. King George whiting may be found on sand patches along the coast, close to shore.

The Visitor Information Centre can provide fishing enthusiasts with tide times, information regarding size, and bag and boat limits, fishing restrictions and a local fishing map that includes GPS co-ordinates.

FISH RESPONSIBLY

When fishing in Whyalla, make sure you familiarise yourself with the rules and regulations that apply.

Fishing restrictions are in place to ensure our valuable fish stocks are protected for the future.

These include protected species (e.g the Giant Australian Cuttlefish), fishing closures, minimum sizes and bag and boat limits. Snapper ban November and December.

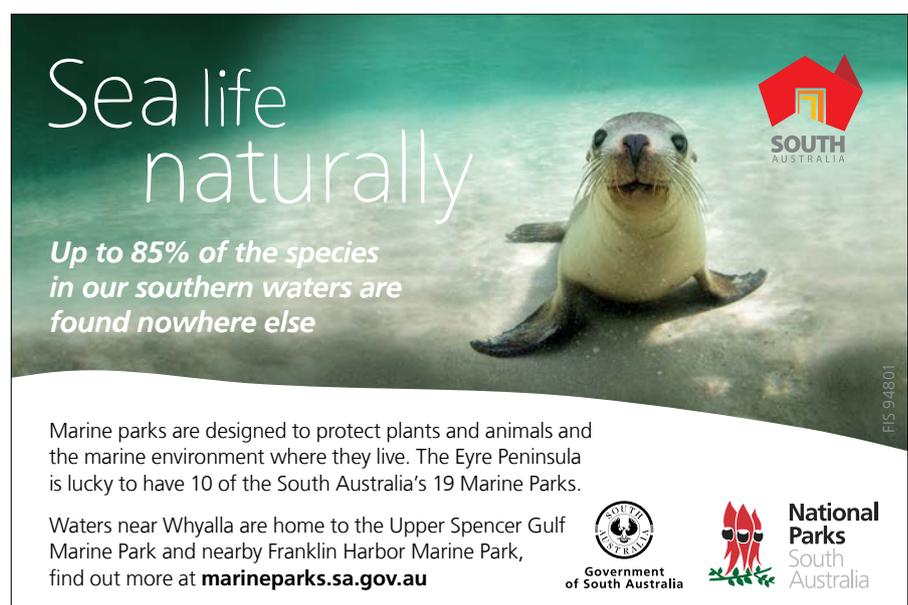

Marine Park Sanctuary Zones are also located in the waters off Whyalla. Sanctuary Zones are like National Parks on the water and have been set aside to help conserve breeding grounds and other areas vital to marine life.

Sanctuary zones are 'no take' areas, meaning that you can't collect animals or plants or use fishing gear within them.

You can find fishing information and maps at the Visitor Information Centre, at your local tackle shop, Natural Resource Centre or you can download the free SA Recreational Fishing Guide app or head to the following websites.

Please familiarise yourself with the rules as penalties apply if these are broken.

Sea life naturally

Up to 85% of the species in our southern waters are found nowhere else

Marine parks are designed to protect plants and animals and the marine environment where they live. The Eyre Peninsula is lucky to have 10 of the South Australia's 19 Marine Parks.

IRON KNOB

Stop over at this historic mining town and be fascinated about its place in history as the birthplace of the Australian steel industry. The 150 or so locals today is a far cry from the glory days, but all visitors will receive a warm welcome with a call into the community tourist centre a "must do". You may even decide that a guided tour overlooking the original open-cut pit is another "must" before you leave town.

Iron Knob is 52km northwest of Whyalla, next to the Eyre Highway at the northern tip of the Middleback Ranges.

HISTORY OF IRON KNOB

The Broken Hill Proprietary Company Limited (BHP) was granted iron ore leases at Iron Knob in November, 1899 and later at the main Iron Monarch quarry in 1914. Ore from Iron Knob is mainly hematite, with an iron content assayed at up to 70%, or more.

Further open-cut mines were opened over the years in the Middleback Ranges to meet demands – Iron Baron in 1933, Iron Prince and Iron Queen in the 1970s, and Iron Duke in 1990.

Mining at the Iron Knob site temporarily ceased in April 1998, but in 2012, redevelopment work resumed on the Iron Monarch and nearby Iron Princess Quarries, in preparation for the scheduled resumption of ore extraction in mid-2014.

There is a large amount of high-quality ore still to be mined, and expectations are now for a long production period of 10 to 20 years. It can be said that the "mountain with a heart of iron" has re-awoken.

THE TOWN

Today, the historic town of Iron Knob has a post office, bowls club, blue-light camp and golf club, plus a free camping ground with a camp kitchen, barbeque, public toilets and a dump point. The nearby Knobbies Park has a playground, picnic seats and exercise equipment.

MINE TOUR

If you have ever wondered “where it all started”, well this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to find out first-hand. A new, purpose-built access road enables views over the original Iron Knob pit, from which work at the Iron Princess and Monarch pits can be seen. A mini-bus takes visitors to the site while the tour guide outlines the history of the town and the mine.

Bookings: At the Community Tourist Centre. Tours are subject to weather and road conditions and may be stopped during extreme weather. Blasting in the Iron Monarch mine may cause delays. (Available Mon-Fri)

COMMUNITY TOURIST CENTRE

Originally built as a worker’s mess hall, Iron Knob’s tourist centre is now a free-entry mining museum, souvenir shop and information centre.

It boasts a display of old mining equipment, photo gallery, mineral specimens and memorabilia displays with a theatrette presenting a short film on the history of Iron Knob. Visitors can enjoy a free cup of tea or coffee and browse the wide range of iron ore jewellery and other souvenirs.

Directions to the tourist centre are well signposted. Facilities include shady trees, ample parking and public toilets. The friendly volunteers will certainly make your visit worthwhile.

Open: Weekdays 9am–3.30pm. Weekends by appointment only. Mine tour bookings welcome.
